FOR LANDLUBBERS

AKAMAS PENINSULA

The only nature reserve in Cyprus

There are lots of wonderful hiking trails in and around Latchi and Polis Chrysochous. You can stroll right beside the beach on the boardwalk that connects Latchi to Polis Campsite. It's an easy walk and it is wheelchair accessible. The more adventurous can hike from Latchi to The Baths of Aphrodite, where besides the famous pool you can tour the little Arboretum. This is where the true Akamas begins - totally laid bare and beautiful. And, your final destination? The gorgeous Blue Lagoon. In fact there are plenty of opportunities to swim at secluded beaches on the way. You could take an exhilarating trek by quad bike from Latchi through the Akamas Peninsula nature reserve with stunning rock formations, flora and fauna and remote beaches just waiting to be explored. The natural beauty of our coastline and interior has to be seen to be believed.

But remember to take plenty of water as this is a long and hot walk in the summer months.

POLIS CHRYSOCHOUS

ANCIENT MARION

The Archaeological Museum of Marion-Arsinoe has an extensive collection of ancient artefacts discovered in the surrounding area. On display are excellent examples of pottery, statues and other finds dating from the Neolithic to the Medieval period.

Once the ancient capital of Cyprus, Polis was formerly known as 'Marion' before being renamed by Ptolemy II Philadelphus in honour of his wife. He was the son of Ptolemy I who founded the Ptolemaic Kingdom.

200 years later in 36BC Cleopatra & Mark Anthony would name one of their children Ptolemy to revive this former kingdom.

Green and Loggerhead turtles come ashore to lay their eggs in May & June all along the coast from Latchi to Argaka.

NEO CHORIO

THE LOOKOUT

Neo Chorio looks out across Chrysochous Bay and Latchi Harbour. It is a picturesque village with many traditional tavernas.

Built on the Laona plateau, and with an average altitude of around 170 meters, Neo Chorio is located in the Akamas peninsula, with a large part of the peninsula being under its administrative authority.

Many of its permanent residents are engaged in the cultivation of citrus fruits, grains, fodder plants, almonds and walnuts, chickpeas, and they produce their own wine.

Neo Chorio is a traditional village. Aptly known as the gateway to the Akamas.

LATCHI & POLIS CHRYSOCHOUS

...traditionally Cypriot!

Welcoming, friendly, warm and fun. There is so much to do in this part of Cyprus that incredibly it is all too often overlooked. All along the coastline there are many good quality restaurants and bars serving a variety of Cypriot and international cuisine and many that specialise in fresh fish. There are many traditional trades, including highly skilled craftsmen and engineers. You can have just about anything made for you, or fixed by them - from upholstery and household crafts to metalwork and engineering. Servicing and maintenance of private boats is available too in Latchi. And, you can even go 10-pin bowling in Prodromi.

GETTING HERE

If you're driving, there are two ways to get to Latchi and Polis Chrysochous. The main route to Polis is via B7 that takes you out through the top of Paphos via Mesogi (avenue) uphill towards Tsada, before making your way to Stroumbi, Giolou and Skoulli. You'll come into Polis first, and you'll need to turn left to get to Latchi.

Perhaps a more scenic route to take is from Tombs of The Kings along the coast road to Coral Bay (E701). From here, you can wind-up through Peyia and around Pikni Forest (E709) on your way up to Kathikas. From there, you begin a relaxing drive down through the hills on the E711 all the time looking out on the fabulous Chysochous Bay stretched out before you. When you reach the bottom, turn left for Latchi, or turn right for Polis Chrysochous.
